Gordon my own -

According to weather forecasts it should be snowing today. However it's quite warm, so it's raining instead in its own gray way.

The roses are still very beautiful and fragrant. They are wide open and wonderful. You are wonderful.

The pictures of birds from you from Paul Miller are great & I love them.

A. we will have to have a fairly large modern living room for them, or

B. they will have to go into our Large + beautiful nursery - they are nursery colors. They are fine. I sent you an un-birthday, un-Christmas, because - I - love - you, stupid present today.

I do love you. The Exeter - Andover game is Saturday and I'll be home to see it. Exeter will be murdered, but it will be fun to be there for the great game anyway.

I think of you often. I write you every day, or else twice the day before or after I sleep. I love you. I have started knitting Little Things for Jane and Anne. They are so pretty - I know I'll spend all my own pregnancy knitting + knitting. You have never told me what you want me to work on about myself to make me a better wife. I don't whine, I hold my stomach in. What else? I love you. Why aren't these words to tell how and how much? It's so completely an all-or-nothing feeling.

I hope air-mail stamps don't go up in price. This is a jerky sort of letter, isn't it? It is almost time for my class for which I am supposed to have read Ulysses of which I have read only half.
Does it rain in the California desert? You haven't mentioned it + I always thought California was very rainy. Does the sand turn to mud? How unpleasant.

Now it is time for classes.

I love you darling - am yours body and soul (what is a soul) and miss you spiritually and physically.

A thousand kisses and many other good things to my Gordon from his Wife,
Cary

I LOVE

YOU

PASSIONATELY.
